

23rd Sunday in Ordinary Time
A Short reflection on today's Gospel Luke 14:25-33

Anyone who does not carry his cross and follow me cannot be my disciple.

Today's Gospel witnesses Jesus warning his followers that the cost of discipleship is great. Jesus' ministry is one of love, of forgiveness, of healing and reconciliation. It is a ministry of inclusion, and equality, which loves the humble and condemns the proud. His teaching had an appeal for many, particularly the dispossessed and the humiliated who flocked to his side in the expectation that justice and fair play would soon be theirs.

How often do we flinch from telling the truth either because it is unpalatable, or it may hurt the receiver, or we may incur dislike as a result of telling the truth! But Jesus never flinched from telling the truth, and he does not flinch now. Jesus is truth itself. He knows that he is on his way to Jerusalem and the cross, not the earthly crown many believe is ahead of him. Here and now he makes it clear that being comfortable and complacent is not the way of true discipleship. True discipleship means putting God first, and that means God before all earthly attachments: family, possessions, ambitions, preoccupations. True discipleship means full focus on the things of God, and a lifting of focus on the self. And that is hard. Jesus knows it is hard, and he warns us to count the cost before we blithely swear our allegiance to God. We need to know exactly what allegiance to God truly means: the ending of preoccupation with the self and the embracing with humility whatever cross is placed on our lives. Our identity, the meaning of our lives, must come from Jesus. Not family, not possessions, not earthly achievements, but Jesus alone.

Vocations Holy Hour – Jesus tells those who want to follow him that they must be able to give up their attachment to their possessions and to take up their cross. We pray for those who feel called to follow Jesus as a priest, deacon or religious, that they will have the strength to detach themselves in order to give their lives in service to him. The next monthly Holy Hour for Vocations will take place in Holy Family Church, Ballymagroarty, Derry, on Friday 9 September, from 8-9pm, and will be broadcast live via the parish webcam which can be accessed at www.holyfamily-parish.com
