

A short reflection on today's Gospel Matthew 28:16-20

A mountain can be awe-inspiring to behold. Its might and majesty, its cloud-capped mystery can animate a spiritual yearning for transcendence, for the glory which transcends the material world; a yearning for God, for Love. It is significant that it is to the mountain Jesus calls his disciples to deliver his final words to them, powerful words, words weighty with the authority and responsibility invested in him by his Father at the start of his ministry and which he is now passing on to his chosen faithful ones. To eleven ordinary, unlettered individuals, utterly lacking in the sophisticated wiles of the political world, Jesus entrusts his sacred mission: the evangelization of all nations. And he does this with the confident knowledge that their faith will carry them aloft; their acceptance of him as the Way, the Truth, and the Life will set their hearts and souls on fire with the passion of their belief. He assures them once again that they will never be alone. He will be with them always. They are one with him, now and forever.

Jesus, let us never forget that to know you are the Way, the Truth and the Life is never to be alone, never to feel lost or abandoned, always to feel at one with you.

Jesus, as we ascend the mountain of our earthly existence towards you may our oneness with you set our hearts on fire like the hearts of those first evangelists, filling us with the desire to proclaim your word always. And when our steps falter and darkness seems to threaten us and our hearts begin to quail, let us feel your warm hand holding ours, and hear your gentle voice saying: 'Be not afraid; I am with you always.'
